

I still get too many calls at night and in the evening with being on the no call list, but I do not want to hear from any banks! They send enough junk mail, free credit offers, and junk mail stuck in my legitimate bank reports...what a waste of time, stamps, paper...money! Aren't more than a million registrations sufficient for someone to come to a realization that the public does not want those calls? It seems fairly evident.

I do not want to see the current 'no call' law weakened.
